

Varybis Haral

Varybis Haral is a tall, dour man. He is the Hundred's traveling peddler, carrying necessities and luxuries to the communities west of the Silver Way. Wagging tongues hint that he cheats the peasants by overcharging them while he panders to the nobility. This isn't true but the suspicion only serves to make this already taciturn man even more solitary. He never uses two words when one or even a nod would suffice, but he is always listening. He doesn't have a wife, so his brother acts as his agent. Orders can be submitted to Varybis in person or to his brother in Getha, when Varybis is traveling.

Varybis not only sells goods. He could be the source of a myriad of new rumors and actual news, if a person were able to win his trust. He buys most of his goods in Getha's market but also sends agents to Uldien for special items. His circuit, described in the Fethael Hundred Gazeteer, takes him around the hundred every ten day.

He is always helpful but isn't one for small talk. His loyalties are to his family – his brother first, then his clan. Varybis has a different sort of loyalty to his customers. He will not cheat his customers and will always give the best value for money, allowing for his profit of course.

If someone were ever to penetrate Varybis' taciturn shell, they would find a hardworking, imaginative man who is a talented businessman. What he'd like to do is hire someone to do the traveling his business requires; talking to customers, chatting with suppliers, groveling to lords, while he sits amidst his ledgers. He is maneuvering for the chance to purchase a franchise in Hyzevel for his brother. This would leave him with the capital to hire one or more employees to travel the byways and back roads that are his world, his job, and his burden.

The following pages describe the usual contents of Varybis' cart. Any special orders are carried in addition to this list, not to exceed the weight capacity of the vehicle.
